WHEREAS, The sacrifices of those who came home from Southeast Asia disabled or suffering from prolonged readjustment problems have met with apathy and little recognition; and,

WHEREAS, These veterans have been burdened with an unfair and negative image in the public mind, due to the unpopular nature of the conflict our country asked them to fight; and,

WHEREAS, Their battlefield performance was, in every respect, the equal of their counterparts who served in other American wars; and,

WHEREAS, The continuing problems that many Vietnam veterans suffer as a result of their military service should be given the highest priority attention:
